WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

MOLLY GIVEN, PHILADELPHIA FEATURES EDITOR

The Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day Parade is back for another festive year. Every holiday season, the City of Brotherly Love celebrates Turkey Day with a parade full of incredible entertainment, colorful floats and of course, Santa Claus. The Thanksgiving Day Parade was always my favorite part of the holiday. It's a tradition that brings joy and envelops the whole community in holiday cheer. This is the 98th anniversary of the event, making it the oldest Thanksgiving Day parade in the country.

LETTUCE FIND AN ALT THANKSGIVING VEGGIE: CDC

1 Ahead of Turkey Day, the CDC has announced another outbreak of E. coli in romaine. As of Tuesday afternoon, there are 32 reported illnesses across 11 states. Thirteen have been hospitalized, and illnesses started on dates ranging from Oct. 8 to Oct. 31. According to the agency, one person developed kidney failure, but there have been no reported deaths at this time. "CDC is advising that U.S. consumers not eat any romaine lettuce, and retailers and restaurants not serve or sell any, until we learn more about the outbreak," reads a food safety alert. "This investigation is ongoing and the advice will be updated as more information is available." The CDC warns against eating any type of romaine lettuce while they proceed with an investigation. This goes for romaine of any kind: "whole heads of romaine, hearts of romaine, and bags and boxes of precut lettuce and salad mixes that contain romaine, including baby romaine, spring mix, and Caesar salad." If you have these products in your home, discard of them. If you feel symptoms such as severe stomach cramps, vomiting or diarrhea, contact your health care provider.

TRUMP WANTED CLINTON, COMEY PROSECUTED: NYT

2 President Donald Trump wanted to order the Justice Department to prosecute two political foes, his one-time presidential opponent Hillary Clinton and former FBI director James Comey, in the spring, but his White House counsel rebuffed him, the New York Times reported on Tuesday. Don McGahn, the White House counsel at the time, wrote a memo to the president outlining consequences for Trump if he did order these prosecutions. The outcomes ranged from the traditionally independent Justice Department refusing to comply, to congressional probes and voter outcry, the Times reported. The New York Times also reported Trump's lawyers privately asked the Justice Department to investigate Comey for mishandling sensitive government information and his role investigating Clinton's use of a private email account and server, but law enforcement officials declined. It was not clear if Trump read the memo or pursued the prosecutions further, the New York Times said. It was also not clear what specific charges Trump wanted the Justice Department to pursue against Comey and Clinton, the Times reported.

TWO ARRESTED IN DEADLY DENVER SHOOTING

4 Two men have been arrested in a shooting on a street corner in downtown Denver in which one person was killed and four others wounded, including one of the two suspects, the city's police chief said on Tuesday. Chief Paul Pazen also said that Monday's late-afternoon barrage of gunfire was a "targeted" attack, not random. He did not offer an explanation for what precipitated the violence. But police spokesman Doug Schepman said detectives were examining a range of possible motives, including whether the shooting may have been gang- or drug-related. Official details about the circumstances of the incident, which sent bystanders diving for cover at the start of the evening rush hour, remained sketchy. The Denver Post cited a witness as saying he saw a gunman open fire with a pistol on a group of people, then get into the driver's seat of his car, slam the door shut and speed away. The witness added that he heard roughly six gunshots and that one person in the crowd appeared to have returned gunfire at the assailant's car as it drove away.

Trump says he will stand by Saudi Arabia despite Khashoggi murder

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo backed the president's decision.

President Donald Trump vowed on Tuesday to remain a "steadfast partner" of Saudi Arabia despite saying that Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman may have known about the plan to murder dissident journalist Jamal Khashoggi last month.

Defying pressure from U.S. lawmakers to impose tougher sanctions on Saudi Arabia, Trump also said he would not cancel military contracts with the kingdom, saying such a "foolish" move would only benefit Russia and China.

Trump said U.S. intelligence agencies were still studying the evidence around Khashoggi's murder inside the Saudi consulate in Istanbul on Oct. 2 and who planned it.

"Our intelligence agencies continue to assess all information, but it could very well be that the Crown Prince had knowledge of this tragic event — maybe he did and maybe he didn't!" Trump said in a statement issued by the White House,

U.S. intelligence sources say the CIA's assessment is that Khashoggi's death was ordered by the crown prince, who is Saudi Arabia's de facto ruler and is widely known by his initials MbS.

Democratic and Republican lawmakers have urged Trump to drop his support for MbS, but the president has been reluctant.

He said on Tuesday that both Saudi Arabia's King Salman and MbS "vigorously deny any knowledge of the planning or execution of the murder," and that the truth may never be known.

He also stressed that Saudi Arabia, a major oil producer, is an important business partner and a "great ally" in the fight against Iranian power in the Middle East.

"The United States intends to remain a steadfast partner of Saudi Arabia to ensure the interests of our country, Israel and all other partners in the region," Trump said.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo on Tuesday defended Trump's support for Saudi Arabia in defiance of international pressure despite the murder of dissident journalist Jamal Khashoggi in Turkey last month.

Pompeo, who spoke following a meeting with Turkish Foreign Minister Mevlut Cavusoglu in Washington, told a news conference that the United States was obligated to adopt policies that furthered U.S. national security interests.

"As the president said today, the United States will continue to have a relationship with the kingdom of Saudi Arabia," Pompeo said.

"This is a long, historic commitment and one that is absolutely vital to Americans' national security," Pompeo said.

Asked if he had seen the assessment of U.S. intelligence agencies about who ordered Khashoggi's killing, Pompeo said he could not comment on intelligence matters.

"When America has the information it needs it will of course do the right thing to protect American interests, and we have done so every time," he said. REUTERS

A foreign exchange student from Taiwan made a comment about shooting up Bonner & Prendergast Catholic High in Drexel Hill. UPPER DARBY POLICE DEPARTMENT

Exchange student who threatened to shoot up school deported

After nearly eight months in jail, a Taiwanese exchange student who threatened to shoot up his Philly-area school will be deported.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

A Taiwanese foreign exchange student who was arrested after threatening to "shoot up" his Philly-area school agreed to be deported at his sentencing hearing in federal court.

Under the agreement, An-Tso Sun, 18, a.k.a. Edward Sun, who was arrested in March after a tipster alerted authorities to his verbal threat against Bonner & Prendergast Catholic High in Upper Darby, will be released from jail, deported to his native Taiwan and reunited with his celebrity parents, actor/director father Sun Peng and mother Di Ying, an opera singer, who reportedly had to sell two homes to pay for their son's legal defense.

"Hey, don't come to school on May 1st. … I'm going to come here armed and shoot up the school. Just kidding," Sun remarked on March 26, 2018, to a classmate after the school bell rang at the end of the day. But hearing the comment made just six weeks after the mass shooting in a Parkland, Florida, school claimed the lives of 17 students and staff, the classmate reported the comment to authorities — who quickly moved to investigate the home where Sun was residing.

Upper Darby police found some 1,600 bullets, ammunition intended for different types of weapons including AK-47s and AR-15s; a crossbow with a scope and seven arrows; a handmade Glock; garrote wire; and a full bulletproof outfit comprising ballistic vest, jacket and pants. Online, they found Sun had been searching for how to acquire an AK-47 and AR-15. The discovery terrified the Philadelphia region, with it appearing to be a near-miss of a mass shooting just outside the city.

The case was quickly transferred to federal jurisdiction. In August, Sun pleaded guilty to one count of being an alien in illegal possession of firearms. On Nov. 19, U.S. District Court Judge Nitza I. Quinones Alejandro sentenced Sun to four to 23 months in prison, and with credit for the five-and-a-half months of time served. The judge ordered him to forfeit all the ammunition in his possession, and granted Sun's immediate parole into the custody of ICE, who will deport Sun back to Taiwan, per his agreement with the court.

"Federal, state, and local law enforcement authorities in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania will continue to work together to prevent tragedy and combat terrorism and threats of violence," U.S. Attorney William McSwain said in a statement on the case. "But it is parents and guardians who serve as the first line of defense in these kinds of situations involving children's access to firearms."

Sun's sentencing to deportation — rather than a lengthy prison term — brings to a conclusion a drama closely watched in Sun's native Taiwan, where his celebrity parents have apologized repeatedly for their son's actions and pleaded for mercy, insisting that he was only joking when he threatened his school and collected the bullets and weapons due to his desire to eventually find a career in law enforcement and his military hobbyist's interest in learning about the tools of the trade.

The stockpile of bullets included 20 rounds of 9mm Blazer Brass ammunition; two AK-style 30-round magazines with ammunition; two AR-15-style 30-round magazines with ammunition; and numerous additional boxes of ammunition — totaling more than 1,600 rounds.

"Armed with over a 1,000 rounds of ammunition, he threatened a mass shooting — an evil plot to cause mass harm and carnage that we believe he would have carried out, if not stopped," Delaware County District Attorney Katayoun M. Copeland said in a statement. "As the result of the swift response of his classmates, school officials and the Upper Darby Police Department, no one was harmed. Mr. Sun is now facing the severe consequences of his actions and deportation."

As of Nov. 20, Sun was still awaiting formal extradition back to Taiwan.

Bedros Keuilian PROVIDED

Making success a holiday ritual

Whether you're a celebrity trainer like Jason Walsh or in need of one, the road to success requires a ritual approach, says author and motivational speaker Bedros Keuilian.

JEFF TOMKO
jeff.tomko@metro.us

We all think it — then eventually overthink it: If only we could re-create the step-by-step process that led to today's killer 6 a.m. workout every day, we'd be invincible in everything we do.

But then comes the stressful day at the office, after-work drinks, picking up the kids from school, answering emails, meal prepping, errands, preparing for the holidays — in other words, life swoops in and spoils even the most perfect formula. And just like that, you're off your game, sleeping in, hitting the snooze, and back to the drawing board instead of where you planned to be — at the gym.

Instead of overthinking your way into developing inconsistent habits, it's time to "man up" and stick to a ritual that has you geared to the goals you aim to achieve and not just getting you through the week, says Bedros Keuilian, entrepreneur, motivational speaker and author of the appropriately titled "Man Up: How to Cut the Bulls and Kick A in Business (and in Life)."

By developing a ritual that works for attaining whatever goal you set — sleep schedule, meditation time, green tea/coffee, workout times, even social media access — and eliminating what he calls the trivial routines that are pulling you away from the goals, your time and mind are better focused toward success in any endeavor.

"It's like being a fighter pilot," says Keuilian, "The pilot goes into the fighter jet, closes the canopy, then goes through his ritual: turning on the GPS, the afterburners — he's mentally preparing for battle. And these days, with all the distractions we have, if we don't go through a starting ritual to lock ourselves down and get that singularity of focus, it's over."

One of Keuilian's biggest tips to keeping to a ritual is applying what he calls the "5 percent" rule: Focus on what matters most toward achieving your goal — making money, gains in the gym — and finding ways to eliminate "chores" that clog up your time — sending out dry cleaning, even food prep ("there are plenty of services that can do that for you," he says) even if to you they seem essential. "Once the ball started rolling, I figured out the formula of buying back my time and outsourcing all the trivial matters to other people when possible."

It's not just motivational speakers who preach the importance of rituals. Jason Walsh, owner of VersaClimber cathedral Rise Nation and one of Los Angeles' most sought-after trainers — whose clientele includes Matt Damon, Bradley Cooper, Minka Kelly and Alison Brie — is a huge proponent of maintaining a ritualistic lifestyle. For Walsh, before he gets his clients movin', he gets his day started with a morning meditation session, as he showed on a recent YouTube segment of "Rituals."

"Having a ritual is critical for health, not only on your physical performance, but also on your mental and spiritual balance as well," Walsh tells Metro. "Your body responds best when an optimal routine is planned and followed. Even the act of meditation or getting up at the same time each day primes you to be ready for action. And that just sets you up for success."

Waking up at the crack of dawn isn't required for success, but keeping that consistent ritual is necessary. So it's time to stop the thinking and get to working toward victory.

"I'm not saying make a rash decision [about your work]," Keuilian says, "but do what Colin Powell would say: If you have as little as 40 percent of the information you need, you're ready to make a decision. But anyone who is looking to gather 100 percent of the information will become irrelevant in anything they do."

Philly family braces for Thanksgiving after fire guts home

Yvonne Smith and her son Jalen Watkins, 17, miraculously survived a Nov. 2 blaze at their Mayfair home, but Smith is still hospitalized and recovering. PROVIDED

A Philly family's home was gutted by a kitchen fire just weeks before Thanksgiving.

sam.newhouse@metro.us

A Philly family is counting their blessings to have survived a recent fire at their Mayfair home, but bracing for a Thanksgiving marred by the recent conflagration.

Philly mom Yvonne Smith, who survived the Nov. 2 blaze at her Mayfair home along with her 17-year-old son by making a near-miraculous escape, is still hospitalized and breathing through a tube, but has been gaining ground steadily in her recovery from second-degree burns.

Smith's very survival is due to the bravery of her son Jalen Watkins, a local high-schooler and basketball player, who woke up inside their home on the 2800 block of Stevens Street, saw the signs of a conflagration and leaped from a second-floor window to get help.

"I was asleep, I woke up coughing, I said, 'Wait a minute,'" Watkins recalled. "Sometimes when she's cooking it will be a little smoky, but it was intense smoke. When I opened my door, that's when I realized something was bad — I couldn't see anything, I couldn't even find my phone. ... Luckily I play basketball, I'm athletic. I jumped, I was fine."

It's not clear exactly how the conflagration erupted in the kitchen, but Watkins got a neighbor to help — and knocked the front door down, freeing his mother who was right behind it.

"The ceiling was breaking and it was super smoky around the time when we found her at the door," Watkins said. "I dragged her out and then the ambulance came."

Now, the family is bracing for the holidays without their home. Watkins has been able to stay with his dad, but his mother remains hospitalized — and she is usually the chef at Thanksgiving, said her niece, Sophia Williams.

> "If I was asleep for 30 more seconds or one more minute, I probably would have died."
> Jalen Watkins

"The intensity of what happened, plus it being this holiday week, adds this unsaid, extra level of stress, making it really difficult," Williams said.

Smith was first put in a medically-induced coma by doctors but has been recovering steadily from second-degree burns, family members said, and while she cannot talk due to a tracheotomy, is writing notes to communicate with family, including her sister who visits her every day, Williams said.

Smith had homeowner's insurance, but no health insurance. The inside of the home was severely burned, the first floor and kitchen and many of their possessions were destroyed.

To help the family, you can find the link on MetroPhilly.us or visit it directly at GoFundMe.com/yvonne-smith039s-recovery.

PEOPLE WHO GRUMBLE TOO MUCH!

This is by far one of THE biggest problems with your average American citizen. Doesn't even matter what race or color. We have soooo much to be grateful for yet we always see the dark side. The glass is always half-empty, and God forbid we have to be patient and WAIT for something. It's actually very childish for adults to sit around huffing and puffing over every uncomfortable, inconvenient situation. Stop grumbling and start humbling is what I say. But I'm certain that someone out there is grumbling while reading this commentary, too.

GETTING IN MY FACE WHEN I GET OFF THE SUBWAY

What's up with the intrusive people getting in your personal space when you get off the subway? Albeit you're usually walking full speed ahead, trying to mind your business and not get in anyone's way. Subsequently, you are abruptly confronted with, "Can I ask you a question?" Wait, didn't they utter that precise thing? It's bad enough they ruined your walking rhythm. Now they are trying for eye contact and a full-on conversation. If these solicitors want some answers to whatever query they have, why don't they just put up a sign? After I read it, I'll talk to them if I'm interested. But probably not.

Taurus Take care of concerns that affect older friends or relatives. Your assistance will be rewarded and will make you feel good. An unexpected change will turn out to be beneficial.

Gemini Concentrate on the changes you want to make. Don't leave anything up to someone else if you want it done to your specifications. Protect personal secrets and private information.

Cancer Get your game on. You can wheel and deal with the best of them if you use your experience and intuition to outmaneuver others.

Leo Don't let an emotional incident lead you to make a poor choice. Step back and do something that will take your mind off things you cannot change.

Virgo A business meeting, day trip or educational pursuit will get you back on track and heading in a positive direction. Don't let what's going on in your personal life disrupt your plans.

Libra Don't leave anything to chance. Make last-minute changes that will help counter interference from someone critical. Don't trust a peer or friend to take care of your responsibilities.

Scorpio Take the plunge and use your imagination when it comes to matters concerning friends or relatives. If someone needs help, offer suggestions, not cash or valuable time.

Sagittarius Trust will be an issue when dealing with a friend or relative. Don't expect someone to keep a secret if you share sensitive information. Protect what's important to you.

Capricorn Compassion and understanding will help you clear up a situation you face with a friend or relative. Offer solutions, but don't take charge or take on someone else's problems.

Aquarius Emotional situations will escalate quickly. Concentrate on personal improvements that will ease stress and bring results that will leave you feeling good about the way you look and what you've accomplished.

Philly's Thanksgiving Day Parade is back.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

The oldest Thanksgiving parade in the country is right around the corner, and this year is going to be better than ever. The 6 ABC Dunkin' Donuts Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day Parade stretches over 1.4 miles and lights up the streets of Philly with colorful floats, performances and much more.

The parade starts bright and early on Thanksgiving morning, at 8:30 a.m. The parade route begins at 20th Street and JFK Boulevard, then proceeds east on JFK Boulevard to 16th Street and runs to the Benjamin Franklin Parkway. Once on the Parkway, the parade will march on to Logan Circle and then to the south lanes of the Parkway, and end after it hits the Philadelphia Museum of Art. The route is free and open to the public.

There have been plenty of popular floats and balloons that have made an appearance at the Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day Parade. This year brings back some old favorites and will even include new floats and balloons. Look out for Waldo (if you can find him), Dan-

Special guests always give the parade a unique touch. This year, the Philadelphia Thanksgiving Day Parade will host Miss America 2019 Nia Franklin, Craig Wayne Boyd from "The Voice," Jerry Blavat, Mandy Gonzalez, Anthony Kearns, Freda Payne, Doug E. Fresh and many more celebrities and entertainers making appearances throughout the parade.

Other fun highlights include marching bands from all over the country, dance routines from local and national dance companies, special performances including singing and acrobats, and much more.

Look out for The Parade Zone, which will feature fun activities from the parade's sponsors. The American Heritage Credit Union will have a money machine where parade-goers have the opportunity to grab as much cash as they can while inside. Dunkin' Donuts will have a refuel zone with tasty coffee samples. Parx Casino will have an entertainment section with live performances by Mandy Gonzalez and the Philly POPS, plus there will be face painting, games and giveaways as well.

Tune in to 6 ABC to check out the parade from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

How superhero movies influenced the new 'Robin Hood'

Taron Egerton and director Otto Bathurst talk making another movie on the English outlaw.

Taron Egerton is the latest to don the mantle of the English outlaw.

"Robin Hood" star Taron Egerton and director Otto Bathurst are well aware that many movies have been made on the heroic English outlaw.

In fact, when they were approached about yet another incarnation of "Robin Hood," they both questioned the need for the film. However, it didn't take long for the pair to see the potential to fit the iconic marksman into a cinematic landscape that's dominated by superheroes.

"We wanted to make it in the mold of a superhero film," Egerton tells Metro. "Those are the type of films that do best. Those are the films that make money. Those are the films that audiences want to see.

"So if you can apply some of those tropes and storytelling techniques to a 'Robin Hood' movie, then you could be on to a winner," he adds. "For a modern audience that are used to 'The Avengers,' you have to find a way to ramp it up and make it feel as dangerous as possible. As high-energy as possible."

According to Egerton, the style of archery used in the film is meant "to feel superhuman."

"That's Robin Hood's superpower," says Egerton. "So Otto decided to dispense with any sense of what was historically accurate and did what was the most exciting."

"This is not meant to be a quaint retelling of the 'Robin Hood' story," adds Bathurst, who makes his feature film directorial debut with "Robin Hood."

"Anybody expecting that is going to be sorely disappointed. Nor is it meant to be a history lesson. The film is, obviously, historically completely bananas and the costumes are outlandish," says Bathurst. "This is not what people looked and dressed like in medieval times. Nottingham didn't look like that, and mining hadn't been invented at the time of the Crusades."

"So the film is an anarchic mash-up, for very conscious reasons. I wasn't interested in making a faithful 'Robin Hood' story," he adds. "There are going to be people that really react to what we have done. There will be people that hate the costumes and think our history is insane. That's cool. But then they've missed the point.

"If we'd stuck to the period, it would have been harder to make it exciting," insists Egerton. "It is a commercial studio movie so you want to make sure it appeals to audiences that are used to superhero films and fast-paced movies."

But what about the criticism that there have already been too many "Robin Hood" movies?

"Stories do get retold," is Egerton's response. "We have always been like that. Whether it is onstage or in movies. It is probably more to do with cynicism being more prevalent. People like to be outraged.

"This is meant to be a reflection for a modern audience," adds Bathurst. "If I had done a traditional 'Robin Hood,' it may have been brilliant and lovely, but it wouldn't feel relevant to your life."

"Robin Hood" is now in theaters.

Food Network stars share their favorite Thanksgiving dishes

Anne Burrell, Christian Petroni and Molly Yeh get us ready for Turkey Day.

MATT JUUL

Pretzel Stuffing

The "Girl Meets Farm" star has a special stuffing recipe in store for Thanksgiving. "It's basically a spin on the classic Thanksgiving stuffing that has the added bonus of pretzel flavor and just the right hit of mustard!"

Molly Yeh

Ingredients:

- 10 heaping cups cubed pretzel rolls
- 1 16-ounce package bacon, cut into 1/2-inch pieces
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 4 celery ribs, chopped
- Kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 1 1/2 cups chicken broth
- 1/2 cup beer
- 1/4 cup Dijon mustard
- 2 tablespoons honey
- 2 large eggs
- Nonstick cooking spray or butter, for greasing the casserole dish
- 1/2 cup chopped fresh parsley

Directions:

Preheat the oven to 200 degrees F. Spread out the pretzel cubes on baking sheets and bake, flipping cubes halfway through, until the bread dries out, about 1 hour. Set aside to cool and increase the oven temperature to 375 degrees. Fry the bacon until crisp in a large saute pan. Remove to a paper towel-lined plate to cool. Drain off 1/4 cup bacon grease from pan; set aside. Add the onion and celery to the pan with the remaining bacon grease and cook over medium heat until soft, about 5 minutes; season with salt and pepper. Set aside.

Whisk together the chicken broth, beer, mustard, honey and eggs in a medium bowl. Grease a 9-by-13-inch casserole dish, then gently combine the bread cubes, bacon, parsley and onion/celery mixture in the dish. Pour the broth mixture over the top and toss gently to coat. Pour the reserved bacon grease over the top; bake until set and golden, about 40 minutes. Yields 6 to 8 servings.

Fried Brussels Sprouts with Apple Gastrique and Candied Pumpkin Seeds

The judge on Food Network's "Ultimate Thanksgiving Challenge" puts quite the spin on brussels sprouts with this epic side dish. "I love this dish because who doesn't love fried brussels sprouts? The crunchiness and the saltiness from the sprout combined with the sweet tanginess of the apple cider gastrique really bring it home for me! The nutty finish of the pumpkin seeds add another layer of flavor that's just really nice."

Ingredients:
- 1 lb. brussels sprouts
- 3 cups vegetable oil
- 1 recipe apple gastrique
- 1 recipe candied pumpkin seeds

Directions:
Prepare the brussels sprouts: trim the stem end of the brussels sprouts and cut a cross about 1/8th inch deep in the top of the sprouts.

Cook the brussels sprouts: Heat the vegetable oil in a sauce pot until a drop of water sizzles in the oil. Fry the brussels in 2 batches until very crispy. Drain brussels on a paper towel and sprinkle with salt. Immediately put brussels in a mixing bowl with the apple gastrique and toss until the brussels are well coated with the sauce. Divide the brussels onto 4 plates and sprinkle pumpkin seeds on top.

Apple Gastrique

Ingredients:
- ¼ cup finely chopped shallots
- ½ cup apple cider vinegar
- ¼ cup honey
- ¼ cup apple cider

Directions:
Combine shallots, vinegar and honey in a sauce pot. Cook over medium heat until reduced by ½. Add apple cider and cook until the mixture is thick and syrupy.

Candied Pumpkin Seeds

Ingredients:
- 1 cup raw, shelled pumpkin seeds
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 1 cup water
- ½ tsp sea salt

Directions:
Preheat oven to 350°F. Spread pumpkin seeds out on baking sheet and put in preheated oven. Bake pumpkin seeds until nicely toasted (about 10 minutes). Combine sugar and water in a medium-sized sauce pot and mix well. Place pot on stove over medium heat and cook, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Add pumpkin seeds to the syrup and simmer on low heat for 30 minutes. Drain pumpkin seeds out of syrup and spread out onto heavily greased baking pan. Put seeds back in the oven for about 15 minutes or until they are very crunchy.

Anne Burrell

Sausage Cornbread Stuffing

Another interesting take on stuffing. The "Worst Cooks in America" host takes things up a notch by adding sausage to the fan-favorite dish. "This sausage and cornbread stuffing is a huge crowd-pleaser! It's sweet, savory and finishes up with a great herbiness — a little something for everyone. And it can be made ahead!"

Ingredients:
- Extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 large onion, small dice
- 3 ribs celery, small dice
- Kosher salt
- 1 pound spicy sausage, casing removed, broken into bite-size chunks
- 3 cloves garlic, smashed and finely diced
- 3/4 cup coarsely chopped walnuts
- 10 sage leaves, finely chopped
- 3 sprigs rosemary, leaves finely chopped
- 10 cups stale cornbread, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 2 cups dried cranberries
- 3 to 4 cups chicken stock

Directions:
Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F.

Coat a large saute pan with olive oil, add the onions and celery and saute over to medium heat. Season with salt and cook until the vegetables start to become soft and are very aromatic. Add the sausage and cook until the sausage begins to brown. Stir in the garlic and saute for another 1 to 2 minutes. Add the walnuts, sage and rosemary and cook for another minute, then remove from heat.

In a large bowl mix together the cornbread, cranberries, and the sausage mixture. Add chicken stock and knead with your hands until the bread is very moist, actually wet. Taste to check for seasoning and season with salt, if needed, and transfer to an ovenproof dish. Bake the stuffing until it is hot all the way through and is crusty on top, about 30 to 35 minutes. MMMMM...stuffing!

The Philadelphia Eagles' defense has become a major concern over the past few weeks. GETTY IMAGES

Eagles defense has more Qs than As Philly's defense is in shambles and it appears that it will only get worse.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

For a short period in Sunday's game against the New Orleans Saints, the Philadelphia Eagles' defense looked half-decent.

That quickly went out the window, however, as Drew Brees torched the Eagles' banged-up secondary for 364 yards and four touchdowns in a convincing 48-7 victory.

This season for the Eagles defense has simply been one to forget.

Unlike last year, where they allowed Tom Brady to throw for over 500 yards in Super Bowl LII, they still made a game-changing play in the waning moments of the fourth quarter to pull out the victory.

However, this year has been an entirely different story, with key players falling victim to injury, a defensive coordinator who refuses to blitz and a secondary that is consistently getting beat in big plays.

The only constant that had remained for the much-maligned Eagles' defense was their ability to stop to run. But even that eventually came to an end over the last two weeks, when opposing backs have run wild.

It also does not help that New York Giants rookie Saquon Barkley is finding his groove. The Eagles take on New York on Sunday in Philly.

In Week 11, the Eagles' defense got punched in the mouth immediately by Saints running back Mark Ingram, who gashed them for a 38-yard run. But that could've been avoided if second-year cornerback Sidney Jones made a half-decent tackle,instead of trying to one-arm it.

Saints head coach Sean Payton made it a point of emphasis to go after the young corner in various ways — and it paid off for them.

"We gotta run right at 22 [Jones] and we gotta throw at 22," Payton said via Peter King's weekly FMIA column. "We're gonna make him defend the run on the first play. We're going after him on three of the first eight plays."

That strategy worked as the Eagles' defense could not stop Ingram or second-year back Alvin Kamara, who combined for 174 rushing yards and a touchdown.

Along those same lines, Dallas Cowboys running back Ezekiel Elliott, who was held to a total of 94 rushing yards in his previous two games, gashed Philly's defense for 151 rushing yards on 19 carries and a touchdown last week.

The star running back's performance left the Eagles' defense searching for answers to questions that they've failed to answer over the course of this season.

"I think we made a couple mistakes, but we just have to get a hand on [Elliott] sometimes," said All-Pro defensive tackle Fletcher Cox.

"On some of those, he just got free and that's not us. We just have to get it cleaned up and hold him up there until the gang can get there to get him on the ground."

It seems like the Eagles did not clean up those issues that plagued them against the Cowboys, this week in New Orleans. For a team that was stout against the run for the first half of the regular season, to see them take a nosedive like this is concerning.

Is it the scheme that defensive coordinator Jim Schwartz is putting together? Or is it their lack of depth, especially on the defensive line? The Eagles are still without Tim Jernigan and rotating Treyon Hester and Ty McGill in the middle.

None of this sounds like a recipe for success. And then, to make matters worse, the Eagles' secondary is reeling, with Rasul Douglas, Avonte Maddox and Sidney Jones all having hurt themselves in Sunday's game.

It appears that Douglas and Maddox should be okay to play against the Giants, but Jones is more of a question mark. If Jones cannot go then maybe Jalen Mills tries to play or more snaps go to undrafted free agent Chandon Sullivan, who tried his best to cover Saints wide receiver Mike Thomas.

Nevertheless, this is not a perfect situation for the Eagles' defense as they are falling fast out of the NFC playoff race and are in line for a top 10 draft pick.

That would be a far cry from where this team was last season at this time. But by the same token, they still haven't fixed their issues, which leaves them in the middle of nowhere.

NFL Power Rankings Week 12: Colts in top 10

Ranking the top teams ahead of Week 12.

LUKE MILLER
sports@metro.us

1. N.O. SAINTS (9-1) LAST WEEK: 1

Rookie Tre'Quan Smith had 12 catches for 214 yards over the season's first 10 weeks. On Sunday, he torched the Eagles for a career-high 10 receptions and 157 yards. If the Saints, who have struggled to find a consistent threat at wide receiver opposite Michael Thomas so much that they briefly kicked the tires on Dez Bryant, can count on Smith, then the last weak link in this scary-good offense goes away.

2. LA RAMS (10-1) LAST WEEK: 2

The Rams won the third-highest-scoring game in NFL history and the first where both teams reached 50 points on the scoreboard. In the end, it was because of their defense — and, we stress, at the very, very end.

Surprisingly, during the most offensive game of the season, Todd Gurley had his quietest day, with no scores and only 94 total yards as the passing games took center stage.

3. KC CHIEFS (9-2) LAST WEEK: 3

Has a quarterback ever thrown for 478 yards and six touchdowns before and taken a hit in the MVP standings? Has a quarterback ever even thrown for 478 yards and six touchdowns before?

Yes. Patrick Mahomes' second six-touchdown game this season leaves him on pace for 54 passing touchdowns, one off the single-season record set by Peyton Manning.

4. PIT. STEELERS (7-2-1) LAST WEEK: 4

Jacksonville beat the Steelers twice last season, ultimately ending their season in the playoffs. Pittsburgh may have just returned the favor early.

Their comeback victory happened on a lot of levels. After being shut out in the first half, Antonio Brown finished with 117 yards and a touchdown.

5. N.E. PATRIOTS (7-3) LAST WEEK: 5

With the whole AFC East on bye, there were no changes in the standings to speak of. Technically, the Dolphins remain just two games behind the Patriots, but New England's lead in the division looks as safe as ever.

6. HOU. TEXANS (7-3) LAST WEEK: 7

This one wasn't pretty, but when you've won seven in a row, they can't all be. That's where Houston stands after starting 0-3. They might just have to keep it up ahead of the almost-equally hot Colts.

7. CHI. BEARS (7-3) LAST WEEK: 9

Khalil Mack finally got back in the strip sack column. That's mostly sarcasm, and Mack's was just one of three turnovers forced by the Bears on Sunday night.

They've also built a nice lead in the NFC North, with the Lions on Thanksgiving next on the menu.

8. LA CHARGERS (7-3) LAST WEEK: 6

The difference this season in the Chargers had been the fact that they were winning all the close games they got themselves into — six in a row until this one. All the more damaging once the Chiefs lost on Monday night. It wasn't the debut they wanted this season for Joey Bosa, but the Chargers still look safe in the standings at the top of the AFC wild card.

9. IND. COLTS (5-5) LAST WEEK: 16

In the midst of a seven-game streak of at least three touchdowns a game, Andrew Luck is somehow quietly on pace for 46 touchdown passes. The Colts are in the middle of their own four-game winning streak, and the return of the quarterback who was the most promising in the game a few years ago is the biggest reason why.

10. CAR. PANTHERS (6-4) LAST WEEK: 10

Two-point conversions are great when they work. The Panthers are still in the driver's seat in the NFC wild card race, but they've lost two in a row for the first time this season.

Hosting Seattle this week would be an absolutely terrible time to make it three in a row, especially when you consider Carolina still has two games against the Saints remaining.

Report: Fultz to miss games due to shoulder

The former No. 1 overall pick missed a majority of his rookie year with scapular muscle imbalance.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

The curious case surrounding Sixers point guard Markelle Fultz and his shoulder has taken another awkward turn.

David Aldridge and Shams Charania of The Athletic reported on Tuesday that at the direction of his attorney/agent Raymond Brothers, the former first-overall pick is scheduled to visit a shoulder specialist within the week in New York.

Along those same lines, Brothers also told Aldridge that Fultz will not participate in team practices or games until the specialist has had an opportunity to evaluate him.

This latest news regarding Fultz was unexpected because it seemed as if he was starting to figure things out on the court. He was in the starting lineup for the first 15 games of this season and made an effort to start taking midrange jump shots.

However, even when he took those jumpers, something still seemed off with his form. It did not have a smooth follow-through and it appeared that he was pushing the ball every time he would shoot.

The former University of Washington standout was eventually moved to the bench as the Sixers acquired Jimmy Butler in a blockbuster trade from the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Markelle Fultz will see a shoulder specialist and miss more games. GETTY IMAGES

Things took another turn as Fultz only played a season-low seven minutes in Monday night's game against the Phoenix Suns. In his place, T.J. McConnell took over the backup point guard duties.

After the game, Fultz was asked about only playing a few minutes, but he did not seem concerned.

"You definitely want to go out there and compete ... I'm a competitor. But, at the end of the day, coach made a decision to do that, so I have to live with it. My mindset is just, when I step on the court, go out there and play. But while T.J. is out there, I'm rooting for him," he told Tim Bontemps of ESPN.

"It's not like I'm sitting on the bench pouting or anything. I want to be out there, but I'm going to root for my teammates."

While it is nice to hear that Fultz wants to play and be out on the court with his teammates, it also appears that his shoulder is not 100 percent.

Earlier this month, basketball trainer Drew Hanlen, who worked out Fultz in the offseason, divulged some interesting information about the 20-year-old in a deleted tweet.

Hanlen said to another basketball trainer, "You don't know his situation. He's still not healthy." The next day, both Sixers head coach Brett Brown and Fultz quickly denounced what Hanlen had said on social media.

"Nobody's ever 100 percent healthy in this game," Fultz told Noah Levick of NBC Sports Philly. "You play five games in seven days, you get bumps and bruises. That's life in the NBA, that's what you sign up for when you get here. But I'm working every day to get better."

From there, Fultz and Hanlen's relationship immediately came to an end, according to Alex Kennedy of Hoops Hype.

Last season, Fultz missed a majority of his rookie campaign with scapular muscle imbalance. He only played in 14 games, which included capturing a triple-double in the team's regular-season finale against the Milwaukee Bucks.

Nevertheless, one can only hope that Fultz and his team take the correct steps in making sure he is fully healthy for the long-term. The young point guard should not come back until he feels like himself because, at the end of the day, it is his career that is in limbo.
